Report on Post Office Scandal.

Washington, June 15.—The first official report on any phase of the post office department scandal has been made public. It is the report of the civil service commission on an investigation conducted at Postmaster General Payne's request into S. W. Tulloch's charge that high officials packed the rolls with personal and political favorites in violation of the civil service rules and so built up machines. It was submitted to the postmaster general by President Proctor of the commission. It bears out Tulloch's charges on that point and severely arraigns the department, saying that the department used the Washington post office "for political and personal purposes to an extent which left the authority of the postmaster but little more than nominal."

A Good Reputation

Is something that is not put on the market for sale as a commodity and can be obtained in no other way except by square, honest dealing. A merchant secures a good reputation by selling pure goods. By such dealing he satisfies his customers and builds up a large business. One of the most important products a merchant deals in is house paint, and it is most essential that this article be a pure one; by this we mean 100 per cent. pure, containing only pure Carbonate of Lead, pure Oxide of Zinc, pure Linseed Oil. Such is the Colonial Paint. Sold subject to chemical analysis. The only paint made that bears State Chemist's report on every package. Sold by C. A. Heath in Barre.
